Worried that your ads will be "intelligently paused" in Chrome?

Will your ads be "Intelligently Paused" in Chrome Browsers? | Flashtalking Can Help

Google recently announced that Chrome browsers (44.5% global market share) will "intelligently pause" Flash ads starting September 2015. So now what?
